Light is a strong factor in the induction of melanocytic naevi, and very often, the application of a gentle light source is most effective in pigmentation induction in the treatment of melanocytic naevi. We report the treatment of 110 naevi, including 40 lentigo simplex, 21 lentigo maligna, and 49 naevi of other subtypes using the new Q-switched pulsed dye laser. A single laser treatment was applied with a pulse width of 350 ns, a fluence of 30 J/cm<sup>2</sup>, and a pulse rate of 300 Hz. The results were excellent and the treatment of naevi was painless. Thirty-six patients were followed up after 1 and 2 years. At the 2-year follow-up, only one naevus showed regression, and the remaining naevi continued to decrease or remained stable in size. There were minor side effects in seven patients: two patients experienced temporary post-inflammatory hyperpigmentation and, in five patients, transient hypopigmentation occurred. Based on our results, laser therapy is a safe and effective method for treating melanocytic naevi. Germany will appeal against the decision to allow use of synthetic gas in power stations to produce electricity. A poll published by the daily "Tagesspiegel" showed that 74% of voters were in favour of using hydrogen in power generation, according to an online survey of 1,947 German voters. The poll, which was commissioned by the paper, showed that 80% of voters were aware of the potential environmental damage caused by the use of synthetic gas. The "Tagesspiegel" said the consultation had also shown that 78% of the voters were in favour of natural gas being substituted for coal. Green coalition The paper's readers' survey suggested that 64% of Germans would be in favour of a "green coalition" of the Green party and the Social Democratic Party. Recent polls have suggested the centre-left Social Democrats are leading in the German election race.
