OTT music. Conventional multi-user text messaging has been used to provide users with the ability to communicate to an outside system even when the users are connected to different networks. In some cases, the multi-user text messaging has been deployed to provide users with the ability to communicate when the users are connected to different networks simultaneously. In some conventional systems, text messages are stored locally at a user device until the user requests to retrieve the text message from the outside system. The user is informed of the existence of the text message, and the user may select to retrieve the text message from the outside system. However, conventional systems often have difficulties with receiving a large number of text messages simultaneously. When a large number of text messages are received by a user, it may be difficult for the user to accurately determine the text messages that the user wants to retrieve. This may be particularly problematic when the user is not actively text messaging. In some cases, when the text messages are stored locally at a user device, the user may choose not to make use of the stored text messages. Accordingly, it may be desirable to provide techniques for solving some of
