But even if it does, the "Flying Scotsman" loco is an interesting one. As far as I understand, it is one of the original engines that was bought by the LMS from the Southern Railway. The loco was a 5-2-1 that was registered at York and was stored in the LMS's Brompton depot. On the face of it, there is an obvious problem. The loco has a top-mounted engine with spring-mounted bogies, a semi-coupled tender, etc. A loco fitted with a full-coupled tender will fail to fit the loco depot's fixed platforms. This is obviously a big constraint to the scenarios, especially for older locos like the Black 5. With the release of the Black 5 (and locos like it) the entire loco class has become much more flexible in terms of top-drawing, coupling, etc. LMS 3F only tank loco in the Advanced version - Alternative 1 got the Basic version of the LMS 3F from Steam, since I had no chance to play Advanced for quite a while. This document provides great detail about the locomotive and in case you want to build the scenario yourself or if you want to create a scenario for the loco, this can provide a foundation to your own design. Now I just have to figure out how to replace a locomotive with a locomotive that has the same MP3D as the one I want to replace. A scenario guide you would need for RMTTS 2014, except you could not use the same players you used to play in 2014, this depends on your lobby. But at least you could use your old players for the lobby and build it again with the same people. Login details could be found on the official website, but since you would need to replace the loco and the player using the same name might be problematic. There is no way to import a username from 2011, you will need to re-register. You must have a Steam user to register your username, which you can get by logging into steam. You can find it in the steamapps folder (probably located in C:\Program Files (x86)\Steam\SteamApp). If you installed steam to the default location.
