The second change introduced with the release of the 2020 release was the introduction of a Ballot Mask. With this in place, you can now see which parts of an image have layers, but also show which parts are not layers. You can either apply the mask to one or more specific layers, or more often, to the entire image. This new feature allows you to copy a specific layer, including a clip path, from one document onto a new document. It saves a lot of time and effort when either editing an image further or creating an image copy in different formats. Every PS user will understand the importance of adjustments to images. But not all adjustments are made to change the appearance and condition of the image. In fact, the changes occur to make sure that the image has exactly what was edited. The first smart object is the one that can adjust or edit images or objects such as photographs and videos on their own. If you are familiar with adjusting and editing images on photos, then this is the main tool that has revolutionized the way designers work with the tools. Photo Matching lets you cut out individual elements from one image and use it inside another. This tool has been around in Photoshop for a long time now. It helps to fill the blank areas of an image with an appropriate color. For example, if you want a blue sky with a half transparent cloud, you can simply create a layer called a cloud and fill the empty space. However, if you want a completely different color for the sky and there is no cloud, Photoshop will pick an appropriate color for you. This is extremely valuable if we are dealing with a limited color palette.
