Comiket 77 Props Cooling Effects Laptop Dropped(Reuters) - U.S. President Donald Trump said on Wednesday the United States was open to renegotiating the North American Free Trade Agreement with Canada and Mexico, but he reiterated his threat to slap steel and aluminum tariffs on all U.S. imports into the country unless the two countries changed the terms of the talks. Slideshow ( 2 images ) The Trump administration announced the tariffs earlier this month, but it stopped short of threats to impose duties on the entirety of Mexican imports or all of Canada's at the same time. The Friday deadline for the United States to submit the text of the proposed NAFTA withdrawal has passed, but Trump said he was still not satisfied with Canada's response to the American proposal. "If they don't get their act together, if they don't make a deal, we'll just do what we have to do," Trump told reporters at the White House. U.S. Trade Representative Robert Lighthizer said in a letter to Congress on Monday that the United States was not providing any new proposals as required by Section 2207 of the proposed changes. "The lack of new proposals is not a positive development and it certainly does not engender confidence that the administration is negotiating in good faith," said Len Saunders, a former U.S. chief NAFTA negotiator. "I don't think it changes the fact that they still want to do 2207 of the agreement, so why they are continuing to go forward is puzzling," Saunders said. Mexico has repeatedly said it will not make concessions unless the United States agrees to reopen NAFTA. The provision, launched in March 2018, allows governments to seek ways to ensure that NAFTA is consistent with their public policy objectives, such as the environment, the economy and employment. But experts say the section, which has never been implemented, is toothless and would not grant the United States the authority to demand new concessions. Canadian Foreign Minister Chrystia Freeland told a news conference on Wednesday that if the Trump administration was unhappy with the proposals, "then why don't they engage constructively in good faith". She also said her country would not change the rules of the talks to accommodate the United States. "Our focus has always been on principles that will make
